Dear Sir.

Yours of the 16th inst came duly to hand, and we had never timed the lads, but since receipt of your letter we have watched them without comment, and find that it averages about $6\frac{1}{2}$ minutes per thousand.

The machine is very satisfactory.

REMARKABLE CHEQUE FRAUDS.

Alfred Wilson, 25, tailor, who had been indicted for forging and uttering three cheques on the London and Provincial Bank with intent to defraud, pleaded guilty to uttering, but not to forging, and the plea was accepted by Mr. Gill, who prosecuted for the Bankers' Association.

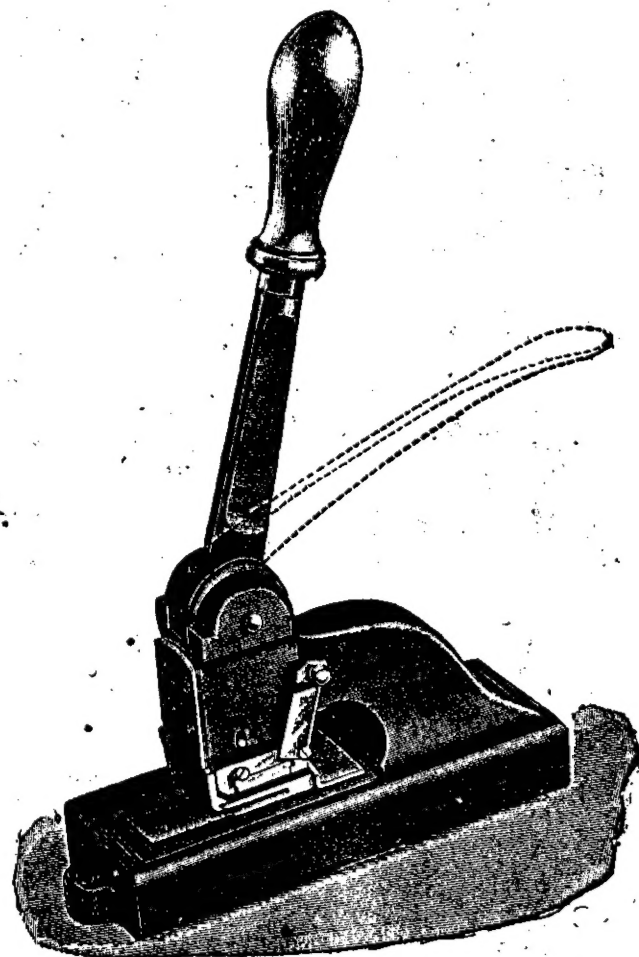

It appeared that the prisoner, having purchased goods at different shops, told a story of having to send that night a guinea to a lady friend, and as the post office was closed, asked the shopkeepers to favour him with a cheque for 21s. in exchange for cash. Having in three cases obtained cheques under these circumstances, he, or somebody else, altered them; one to £75, one to £98; and one to £123. There were several cases besides the three included in the indictment, and the amount prisoner succeeded in obtaining was about £600.

In reply to the Recorder, Mr. Gill said the alterations of the amount in the cheques were effected by some chemical means so powerful that no glass could trace the erasure of the original figures.

The Recorder said that was a most serious fact for the bankers and the public. Prisoner was evidently the confederate of a number of ingenious and clever forgers, whose acquaintance he probably made whilst he was in penal servitude.

Sentence of seven years' penal servitude was passed.

ROBBERIES FROM LETTER BOXES

SCIENTIFIC THIEVES PUZZLE THE CITY POLICE

Hundreds of pounds in cheques and bank notes are being stolen just now from letter boxes in the City.

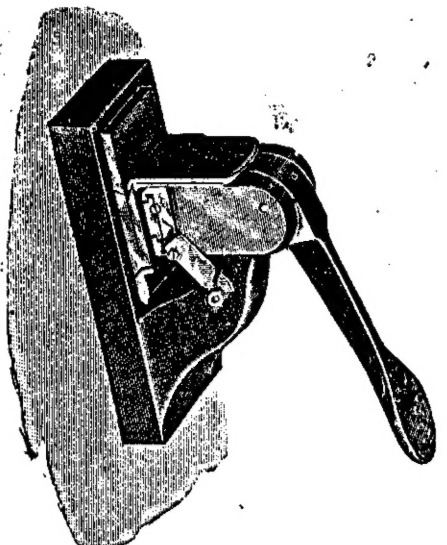

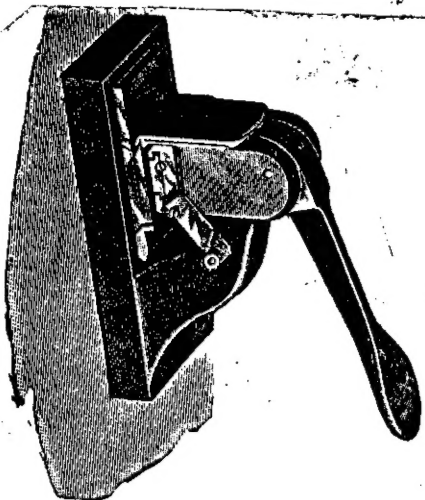

The mode of procedure suggests the careful discrimination of experience, and the City police believe the robbers belong to a well-known gang.

A strong piece of cardboard inserted the whole length, with a strip of corner whalebone, constitutes their stock-in-trade. At a convenient moment this is carefully pushed through the letter-boxes. In order to get the cardboard through it must be bent, or cut, with the result that, immediately it drops inside the box, and the thief, as he has swung the spring in the whalebone, forces it back against the sides of the letter-box.

When the thief, armed with his "stock-in-trade," approaches a letter-box, he inserts the cardboard, and, after a moment, he pulls it out, and the contents make their way into his pocket. The thieves make their work very quick and business-like. They look the late evening and early morning postal deliverymen, and, being the first to see the postmen, they are not troubled by their bulky are large.

CHEQUES QUICKLY CASHED

Many of the houses plundered are those which advertise largely all cheques, postal orders, etc., must be addressed to a certain firm, and are as well as cashed. The robbers are as well as cashed. The police have discovered that many cheques have been cashed an hour or two after being stolen. Moreover, crossed cheques present a difficulty. By means of a cheque, if the thieves are able to obliterate the words "and Co." written between the lines, an endorsement which makes the cheque open. They then pay it over to a tradesman, who, unaware of their hands, then cashes the cheque. The tradesman pays the cheque to his own account, and is surrounded a few days later when he finds that it has been stopped. It is estimated that during the last six weeks the thieves have netted some running. The only office held by the police are the cheque-book cannot be left behind, and the thief andore it on the cheque.

LETTER-BOX THEFTS.

The police in the West Central district have had brought to their notice a number of letter-box thefts which have taken place in the neighbourhood of Holborn. Their investigations show that the usual methods adopted by letter-box thieves of inserting pieces of wire or pieces of wood at the ends of which are adhesive substances into the letter-boxes have been followed. It is reported that a cheque for £400 stolen from one of the letter-boxes has been successfully negotiated in Birmingham, while in other instances the thieves have, by chemical means, obliterated the "and Co." mark, and have added figures to the amounts in the cheques.

NOVEL CHEQUE FRAUDS.

A somewhat ingenious, but not uncommon form of cheque fraud has recently been practised upon a well-known London bank. The criminals have in the first instance obtained possession of letters containing cheques from the private letter-boxes of firms in the suburbs. Then, by some means at present unknown, the original writing and figures have been eradicated or altered and the cheque presented for payment.

Before the use of specially prepared paper the employment of acid to remove ink from cheques was not infrequently employed, but examination of those recently tampered with has shown that another device has been resorted to, a fact which may act as a warning to other banks.
